I have not been in the habit of replying to the many misrepresentations that have from time to time appeared in the newspapers against me, and should not depart from this rule, but for the fact that I have no other mode from this rule, but for the fact that I have no other mode of correcting this misrepresentation. This article is false from the beginning to the end. I never made application to join any know-nothing lodge, or any lodge of any political party. On the contrary, when invited and sometimes urged by my friends to join this party, I steadily, from first to last, refused to do for.

The movements of the portific list two weeks, however, have not beeit important. Our dates by this arrival are to the 21st from Vera Cruz; to the 18th from the capital. The principal news concerns the appointment of a new cabinet, which is as follows:

Minister of War, Jose M. Garcia Conde.
Minister of the Treasury, Manuel Payn's.
Minister of Fomento, Sabina Flores.
The appointments, if we are to believe the papers, would seen sto have been more a matter of form than anything else—a sort of concession to the actual state of things. Indeed, we are informed by the Siglo that a number of representatives had waited upon the President, and assured him that nothing could be done towards conferring on him the extraordinary powers he asked till a new cabinet was installed. And whether in any case these extraordinary powers will be conferred was, at last accounts from the capital, uncertain. The old rumous of the probable retirement of the President and his succession by Juarez were, in consequence, rife again—with what probability, if any, we have not here the means of determining. sion by Juarez were, in consequence, rife again—with what probability, if any, we have not here the means of determining.

The late hour at which the steamer arrived renders it impossible to get our regular mail from the office, and our outside files are necessarily imperfect. We see, however, no material change in the general condition of the neighboring republic. The government, nowthitstanding rumors of every description, would seem to continue atrong in the confidence of the people, and no more than the usual number of social disorders are reported.

THE JENNES PROPERTY.—The immense estate of the The Jankers Property.—The immense estate of the Jennens family was formerly taken possession of on Tuesday last by Mr. Joseph Martin, heir-at-law. Mr. Martin, accompanied by his uncle, Mr. James Martin, and one of his agents, Mr. George Pratt, proceeded by train to Sunbury, and from thence to Acton place, Suffolk, the residence of the late Wm. Jennens, "the rich." This portion of the property was purchased from the Daniels family by Bobert Jennens, the father of William "the rich," and, as the latter glied intestate, it descends to Mr. Joseph Martin, as an heirloom. The other portions of the estate are strictly entailed, and pass to Mr. Martin under wills which have been duly proved.—Liverpool paper.

No. 8.

The recent arrival in this country of Dr. Charles Mackay, the author of "A Good Time Coming," is thus chronicled in one of the New York delly papers:

"In the list of passengers by the Asia, from Liverpool, on Saturday, we notice the name of Charles Mackay, the sonig-order and collection, and we leain from a perting blessing which Williner & Smith's European Times bestoms upon him, that Mr. Mackay has come across the Atlantic for the double purpose of making himself personally familiar with our manners and institutions, and to deliver a pleasant lecture to, us on ballad poetry. We have no doubt his, visit will prove profitable, not only to himself, but to us. Mr. Mackay is mrither a., Thackeray nor a Tennysou, but his name and his songs are familiar to the people on this side of the Atlantic. He has been for several years on the editorial staff of the London Illustrated News, and one of his songs, There is a Good Time Coming, Boys, with its cheery refrain, is not only as familiar as a household word among us, but it has given birth to an infinite brood of similar compositions which have the philanthropic aim of infusing hope, courage, and self-rellance into the hearts of the people. Mr. Mackay's last ballad, which has recently appeared in the paper of which he is or was the editor, is a composition of the same character, and as well adapted to the present time as though it had been written expressly to counteract the gloom of a general suspension of specia payments by the banks. It is called 'Over the Way.' The last stanzas gives the mond of the song:

"Though poverty, frowning, paes in at my door, Pill neither be beston nor vainly deplace."

"Though poverty, frowning, pass in at my door, I'll neither be beaton nor vainly deplore; I'll sears blum sway with hard work, if I can, And lock in his face with the heart of a num, And histing at home all the joys that I may, Forget my proud friend who lives over the way."

Forgst my proud friend who lives over the way."

"Mr. Mackay is a native of Scotland, and about 45 years old, but has lived in London from his early boyhood, and has been connected with the newspaper press for many years. He was first employed on the Morning Chronicle, and was for a short time editor of the Glasgow Argus. While travelling in this country it is understood that he is to write letters for the Illustrated News. He left here yesterday for Boston, where, we presume, he will commence taking his notes of things on this side the Atlantic."

popular and national," Dr. Mackay proposes to give the American public another and novel entertainment— namely, the reading of an unpublished narrative poem written by himself. This will be an attractive feature in

The following letter, written by Charles Lamb to the poet Pringle, which is now for the first time published, is, like everything he ever wrote, singularly characteristic of the gentle-hearted Elia. The original manuscript of the letter, which is without date, enriches the autographle collection of a gentleman in this city, who has kindly permitted us to copy it :

permitted us to copy it:

Dear Sur: I have received your proof, and shall be happy to look over the rest, though really I see no occasion. I can suggest no improvements but two insignificant ones: Page 9.1 cannot relish the phrase "pet fawn."

The word pet is singularly distasteful to me. Besides being feminine, (girlish, rather,) it is used as a nurseling, bred up by hand, taken to; but here the black boy seems to be rather the pet, and the animal the patroness. "Fond Fawn," perhaps. I do not know the general title of your book, but as it seems calculated for Sierra Leone, or the Plantations, I would suggest "Nigrum Verses," and wish it a whiter fate than my "Album Verses." The "Lion Hunt" is spirited, but the "Evening Rambles" is my favorite. If it is to be a colonial volume, I do not object; but if it is for home circulation, really the gnu, and the vley, and the genusole, and the orbit may be choke pears. But for tropical perusal they are in place. True, they are referred to notes for explanation, but po-ctry requires instant sympathy. Page 19, last two lines seem lengthened abruptly; somehow thus:

And call the dreamer from bit trance, for mile, or game, or meeting the dares.

And call the dreamer from his trance, To milk, or game, or moonlight dance.

You don't expect an Alexandrine change in eight-syl-Table verse.

I shall have pleasure in seeing you at Highgate a few weeks hence.

In haste,

It is now more than twenty years since the mortal part of Charles Lamb, one of the most delightful writers who ever lived, was laid, in accordance with his own feeling, so far as it could be gathered from his expressions on a subject to which he did not often, or willingly, refer, (so states his biographer) "in a deep grave, simply dug, and wattled round, but without any affectation of stone or brickwork to keep the human dust from its kindred carth." Since then, the world has been made fully ac-quainted with the story of his life, and what a sad record it is! How the knowledge of it intensifies his pathos, and how pathetic it makes even his humor! And yet few have enjoyed life as he did, notwithstanding all that was denied to him; though irksome labor wearfed out the heart of his days; and over his small household, madness, like death in the vision of Milton, continually shook its dart," and only, at the best, "delayed to strike." With all its sorrows, he still clung to life, and shuddered at the prospect of change. Hear what he

"The young man till thirty never feels practically that he is a mortal; he knows it, indeed, and, if need were, he could preach a homily upon the fragility of life; but he brings it not home to himself any more than in a hot June day we can appropriate to our imagination the freezing days of December. But now—shall I confess the truth !—I feel these audits but too powerfully. I begin to count file probabilities of my duration, and to grudge at the expenditures of the moments and shortest periods like miser's farthings. In proportion as the years believe this afternoon.

Talfourd's vindication of his friend's apparent indiffer cuce towards immortal interests and celestial relations is, doubtless, as true as it is beautifully expressed. "Not daring to look forward," says Talfourd, "even for a lit-tle month, Lamb acquired the habitual sense of living entirely in the present; enjoying with tremulous zest moment, and making some genial, but sad, amends for the want of all the perspective of life by cleaving, with fondness, to its nearest objects, and becoming attached to them even when least interesting to

When Col. Lee, of New York, was collecting subscriptions for the equestrian bronze statue of Washington, new standing a monument of patriotism and art at the corner of Union Park, he had occasion to visit an old curmudgeon in the neighborhood, and, pulling out his subscription paper, requested him to add his name to the list. But old Lucre declined respectfully.

"I do not see," he said, "what benefit this statue will be to me; and five hundred dollars is a great deal of money to pay for the gratification of other people." Benefit to you?" replied the colonel; "why, sir, it will benefit you more than anylody else. The statue can be seen from every window of your house; it will be an ornument, and add dignity to the whole neighborhood, and it will perpetually remind you of the Father of his Country—the immortal Washington!" "Ah! colonel," answered old Lucre, "I do not require a statue to remind me of him, for I always carry Washington here," and he placed his hand upon his heart. "Then let me tell you," reptied Colonel Lee, "if that is so, all I have to say is, that you have got Washington in a d—d tight place!" Oct all boast of their theatres-of their regular places of amuse boast of their theatres—of their regular places of amuse-ment—of "stars" and popular "stock companies," the federal metropolis must be contented to acknowledge her deficiency in this respect—not because her resident pop-ulation will not evince their appreciation of the drama by supporting it, but because we have no theatre and no con-cert-room large enough of sulfathe for bringing it effec-tively before the public. At the time the "old National" was burned many persons expressed the opinion that the disaster would be of positive benefit to the city, thinking, no doubt, that a new and more modern building would no doubt, that a new and more modern building would soon arise from the ruins. These expectations, however, have not yet been realized, and in the mean time our theatre-going population are afflicted with emen for want of amusement.

Our citizens, however, have not been inactive all this time. It is true that public meetings have not been called, but a meeting was held at the Academy of Music on Thursday night last for the purpose of forming a dramatic association, and either creeting a building with all the modern improvements of the day, or fitting up one of our largest concert halls. But nothing was done in of our largest concert halls. But nothing was done in consequence of the slim attendance. Another project, and one that seems to be feasible enough, has been hit upon by Mr. Wm. J. Nagle, who for the past two weeks has been drawing large crowds at Odd Fellows' Hall to witness the performance of his juvenile comedians. That gentleman has determined to open a list for stock subscriptions to fit up a reat theatre in this city for the winter. If he will but secure comfortable accomedation for an audience of from fifteen hundred to two thousand persons, we feel quite confident that his enterprise will be successful The great fault heretofore has been that our theatres have either been too large or too small. The expenses of large building are just as heavy for a small audience as for a large one. With a small theatre, the same play could be represented for several successive nights with profit, because the entire number of our theatre-going population could not gain admittance to the first repre-sentation, and perhaps not for several nights. The expense of gas and servants would be much less. Many persons will go to a well-appointed theatre two or three times a week who will not go every night. We hope that every encouragement will be given to Mr. Nagle in his new enterprise. Miss Juliana May, it is now confidently asserted, will give a concert here about the middle of November, and it is but proper that something should be done to secure ample accommodation for the packed audience she will attract in this her native city.
